1. Anti-Communist forces in east-central China include the following:

Taihu (116- , 28- ) area: Southern Yangtze People's Anti-Communist and National Salvation Army (PACANSA), commander CHIN Chia-jang*, with 10,974 men and 5,450 guns; contact is maintained by radio.**

Southern Anhwei: Southern Anhwei 1 Column of China Anti-Communist Revolutionary Army, commander TU Chih-kang, with 3,500 men and 1,700 guns; there is no contact in operation.

Tapioshshan (115- , 31- ) and Tungpaishan (113- , 32- ) area: 58 Independent Column of PACANSA, commander YUEH Chi-shan, with 32,406 men and 32,406 guns; contact is by courier.

2. HUANG Pei-chi formerly had 620 men under her command, of whom 160 were in Pootung near Shanghai, 240 were in P'ing-hu Hsien (121-02, 30-42), and 220 were in Shaohsing Hsien (120-34, 30-00). During the evacuation of Nationalist troops from the Choushan Islands, 320 of her men were brought back into the regular Nationalist army and withdrawn with it to Taiwan. Since then she has been unable to return to either P'inghu or Pootung. She has, however, sent cadre members to Shaohsing to renew contacts with her troops there and her future plans will be determined by their report.

3. There are 19 radio stations on the China mainland in contact with the Continental Operations Department***. There are also 19 more stations on the coastal islands in contact with the Continental Operations Department.

25X1A * [REDACTED] Comment. No characters were received for any names.

25X1A ** [REDACTED] Comment. The radio stations are not under the control of the Mainland Combat Section or of the Continental Operations Department, according to a specific statement by the source, but presumably contact is, as stated below, with the latter organization.

25X1A *** [REDACTED] Comment. The relation of this organ to the Mainland Combat Section is not explained by source.
